

Silicon Republic.com

Renewable energy software company Enverian to create 15 jobs over next two years

04.10.2012

Renewable energy software company Enverian to create 15 jobs over next two years

Pictured Above: Colin Rogan, CEO, Enverian; Minister for Arts, Heritage and the Gaeltacht Jimmy Deenihan, TD; Kenneth Matthews, CEO, IWEA; and Alan Carey, director of Strategy, Enverian

Enverian, the new Irish venture set up in 2011 to provide software solutions for the renewable-energy sector, is planning to create 15 new jobs over the next two years.

The company, which already has offices in Dublin, London and New York, received €1m in seed capital funding from Enterprise Ireland and the AIB Seed Capital Fund, led by Enterprise Equity in March. At the time, Enverian said it planned to create 18 new roles on the back of the equity investment.

As for the additional 15 new jobs, they will be mainly in the areas of sales, marketing and consulting.

Speaking at the Irish Wind Energy Association's autumn conference in Killarney this morning, Enverian chief executive Colin Rogan said the increase in employment is a reflection of the growth the company has been experiencing.

Enverian has been growing its client base in Ireland, the UK and the US. "Enverian has seen strong performance in the market in Ireland and internationally and our announcement reflects the growing confidence in energy markets of our target clients," said Rogan.

The company recently launched the second generation of its cloud-based business solution Enverian Developer. The product aims to help power companies manage a portfolio of energy-development opportunities.

Carmel Doyle

Growth in year one leads to 15 new jobs at Enverian

04.10.2012

Growth in year one leads to 15 new jobs at Enverian

Pictured Above: Colin Rogan, CEO, Enverian, Minister Deenihan Dept. of Arts, Heritage and the Gaeltacht, Kenneth Matthews, CEO, IWEA, Alan Carey, director of strategy, Enverian

An Irish renewable energy company set up last year, Enverian, announced the creation of 15 new jobs over the next two years at the Irish Wind Energy Association's (IWEA) Autumn Conference 2012 today.

Enverian recently launched the second generation of its business solution, Enverian Developer, a cloud-based application that assists power companies to manage a portfolio of energy development opportunities and brings an international, standards-based approach to project tracking, ranking and valuing.

The company has been growing its client base in its target markets of the Ireland, UK and the US. Enverian Developer is currently being used by Eddie O'Connor's Mainstream Renewable Power which recently supported the company in a press release announcing their strategic partnership.

Speaking at the IWEA Conference, Colin Rogan, chief executive of Enverian said: "The increase in employment reflects the growth the company has been experiencing. Since winning the award this year for Best Angel or VC Backed Startup of the Year, Enverian has seen strong performance in the market in Ireland and internationally and our announcement reflects the growing confidence in energy markets of our target clients."

Enverian received seed capital funding from Enterprise Ireland and AIB Seed Capital Fund, led by Enterprise Equity.

Sorcha Corcoran

Enverian announces 15 new jobs - Mozilla Firefox

File Edit View History Bookmarks Tools Help

Enverian announces 15 new jobs

www.windtech-international.com/company-news/enverian-announces-15-new-jobs

Google

HOME MAGAZINE PROFILE ADVERTISING SUBSCRIPTION SERVICES CONTACT US LOGIN Find

News

- Editorial Features
- Events
- Previous Issues
- HUSUM Daily 2012

Follow us on

Latest Issues

October 2012

Email Services

- Windtech International Newsletter
- Third party info

2012 ANNUAL CONFERENCE & EXHIBITION

The UK's Premiere Renewable Energy Event Glasgow, 30 Oct-1 Nov REGISTER NOW

END-TO-END SERVICES FOR OFFSHORE PROJECTS

Data integration and management LEARN MORE

Enverian announces 15 new jobs

Thursday, 04 October 2012 11:43

Enverian has announced the creation of 15 new jobs to be filled over the next two years on the back of sustained growth.

This expansion follows a period of ongoing development for the company since its foundation in 2011. Enverian has recently launched the second generation of its business solution, Enverian Developer. This cloud based application assists power companies to manage a portfolio of energy development opportunities and brings an international, standards based approach to project tracking, ranking and valuing. The company has been busy growing its client base in Ireland, UK and the US which have been its target markets.

Share     Share

Newer news items:

- 10/10/2012 - Electranova Capital invests in Seatower
- 10/10/2012 - Martin Huss becomes new CSO of A2SEA

EWEA 2013

4-7 February 2013
Vienna, Austria

Special offer:
Register for FREE
by 14 October

10:14 11/10/2012